

Creating New Dialogues and Solidarity in the Face of Inequalities A Music Performance and Workshop

Gregory JACKSON

School of Business and Economics, Freie Universität Berlin

Svenja TAMS

Berlin School of Popular Arts, SRH Berlin University of Applied Sciences

Online workshop, 90 mn

March 25, from 5:00 to 6:30 pm CET

The session combines a music performance and a workshop. The aim is to generate dialogue about the use of arts-based formats for making inequality visible and building new forms of solidarity to reduce inequality. The music performance segment will blend live looping based music and spoken word text from ethnographic research, illuminating different aspects of inequality. The workshop segment will then explore how this performance may offer a template for artistic and scholarly intervention by reporting on projects undertaken by students in Berlin that incorporate intercultural field research of hidden voices, bringing inequality into a dialogue with different artistic mediums.